Free community transport - have your say and win

A public meeting is to be held to discuss a transport service for the Coastal Taranaki on November 27.

The investigation into a transport service for the coast is being conducted by the New Zealand Red Cross in partnership with the Taranaki District Health Board.

It will be a free transport service for people struggling to make hospital appointments, attend training opportunities and other services. The Coastcare Medical Trust has also jointed the initiative and will be hosting the public meeting. It is hoped the project will also bring people to Opunake and the proposed new health centre. A survey form has been distributed around the coast and was also published in the Opunake & Coastal News asking for people's input. The survey form is also available in paper form at local libraries and Four Square supermarkets. People can also access the survey form online at www.surveymonkey.com/s/Coastal Transport. All those who complete the survey form go into the draw to win $150 Opunake Business Association vouchers. The public meeting will be held on Tuesday November 27 at Sandfords Event Centre, Opunake at 7:30pm.

BBC (Bible Believers Corner) Shiloh

I have just got back from my first visit to Israel. My biggest impression is that the Bible speaks of real events, real people, and real life.

I visited Shiloh, the place where the tabernacle, the tent temple of Israel, stood for 369 years. It was a continuous centre of worship for a longer period than either Solomon's or Ezra's temple. This was near where Abraham came into Canaan and where Joshua centred the Jewish religion. It was the place where Eli the priest condemned Hannah thinking she was drunk. She prayed for a son and when that son Samuel was born she brought him back to Shiloh for God's service. And it was from here that the prophet Samuel went out and anointed both Saul and David as kings of Israel.

I also visited the Temple Mount in Jerusalem and saw some of the beams, the cedars of Lebanon, used in the temple built by King David's son Solomon. On my return to NZ I also saw a news report that Arab Muslims had just burnt those ancient beams!

In just a few days I had seen and linked places, events and people from Abraham's time through Samuel, King David and Solomon through to a modern news event. Biblical places and events are all real. And they affect life and news events today. But the Bible just doesn't give history. It also foretells the future. It warns of a time of reckoning. It warns of a time of judgement, of an audit of everyone's life.

Everyone of us has a soul, the central life element in every human. And everyone of us will have to give account for what we have done with and to that soul. Of course that judgement may seem remote to most. But the Bible tells us that once the third temple is built in Jerusalem there will be only three and half years left before the end.

Is this a vague future event? While in Jerusalem I also saw the equipment for the third temple, all is ready. Someone asked the Rabbi how long after the fall of the Dome of the Rock before the beginning of the building of the third temple. The answer was, "Ten minutes!"

The female motoryclist failed to take the bend just south of the Opua Road on Surf Highway 45.

Letter to the Editor Well known identity returns

On Sunday December 4 I arrived at the Opunake Hall of the Order of St John in King Street to board a Pickering's Bus to join the Opunake Friendship Club travel to the Hawera Repertory Society production of 'The Little Shop of Horrors' (a very enjoyable afternoon). Most of the 27 people on board were long time Opunake residents but there were also a couple I didn't know. However, there were a proportion of them who were surprised that we were back, while others, who knew we were back, had thought we had left again as they hadn't seen me around. The reason for this is that I am currently the nightshift vet at Riverlands Eltham Ltd where the beef and bobby calf processing is done. (No longer are we allowed to call them Freezing Works). Had the Friendship Club known we were back I would probably have been asked to drive the bus as I have previously done so. I started with MAF, went to NZFSA, then to MAF and am now with MPI but I haven't changed my role of being a meat veterinarian, only changed locations and positions within the organisation. The rest has been the result of restructuring with the government.

A number of things have happened during the five years including my having a double knee replacement and the dogs and cat being exported to Australia to Colleen and Khyle, who now own a veterinary practice in Tasmania; so I no longer need the mobility scooter to get around, but it is a bit too far to Eltham to use it especially for night travel. Maurice won't allow me to buy a motor bike although I am the proud owner of a Vespa 50. A number residents of Opunake past and present also work at Riverlands (although it is difficult to recognise them in their whites with hair nets and facial hair covers). As a result the editor of this paper has agreed to resurrect my column (not as Councillor's column as I am no longer a councillor, although I am now involved with the ASSE Student Exchange Programme again) for a five week period to update those who are interested with events and happenings of the last five years.

NPDC getting strategic about recreation and open spaces

What does New Plymouth District need for recreation and open space, and do we have the right mix of facilities? This is the focus of a proposed Recreation and Open Space Strategy which is being considered this week by the district's four community boards. Their recommendations will go to a Policy Committee meeting which will consider approving the development of a strategy.

Manager Parks Mark

Bruhn says a strategy would help the Council make strategic decisions about the recreation, sport and leisure needs of the community as well as the requirements of high-performance sport, connectivity and use of open space, regional biodiversity and local identity amenities.

A district aquatic facility review would run alongside it.

"The plan is to look at the current demand for recreation and open space as well as future trends, and establish whether we've got the supply of facilities right," says Mr Bruhn. If the creation of a strategy is approved, a community reference group would develop a draft strategy next year for public consultation. A report on the current use of recreation and open space in the district shows that the top three things people wanted open spaces to provide are walkways, beach access and events/ concerts.

Since 2008 the use of the Coastal Walkway has increased by 45 per cent, and since 2001/02 the number of users at the Todd energy Aquatic Centre and district pools has risen by more than 100,000.

Within New Plymouth District, 87.7 per cent of dwellings are within 400m of a council-owned open space and 89.3 per cent are within 500m.

Fresh look at commercial use of local parks and reserves

The commercial use of council-owned parks and reserves is under review.

On December 4 the Policy Committee will consider releasing a discussion document on commercial activity and events on parks and reserves for public feedback. The comments received would help in the drafting of separate policial use, which would later be released for public consultation.

"Currently the management these policies are outdated

"Having a single policy on commercial activities and one for events would make the requirements clear to everyone. "This also gives us the opportunity to properly manage commercial opportunities along new reserves such as the Coastal Walkway extension to Bell Block - in a way that doesn't detract from people's enjoyment of our parks and reserves."

Discussions have already taken place with existing commercial operators, tangata whenua and Venture Taranaki to identify issues that should be addressed. If the Policy Committee gives its approval, submissions on the discussion document would run from December 10 to February 28.

Lest we forget – a backgrounder on Armistice Day (November 11)

Armistice Day is a poignant time when on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month we pause to remember those who have died while serving our country.

Historically it is the 94th anniversary of the signing of the Armistice between the Allies (including New Zealand, Australia, the United Kingdom

Remembrance Day in Opunake

France) against Germany which brought the First World War (1914-18) to an end after four long years. New Zealand had over and 58,000 troops in the field at this time - mostly in France or England, with 4000 in Egypt, and a further 10,000 troops were training in New Zealand. Just a week earlier New Zealand troops had liberated the French town of Le Quesnoy, near the Belgium border, which had been occupied by German forces since 1914.

While many of the overseas troops became part of the occupying forces in Germany, most returned home early the following year. In addition, about 3000 wives and 600 children of New Zealand soldiers who married abroad returned in the troopships during the demobilisation. For troops in France, the news of the Armistice was reportedly received 'generally in a matter of fact way, totally devoid of any demonstration of emotion.'

Trooper George Tuck from the Auckland Infantry Battalion wrote to his parents the following day saying, 'for the first time since facing the enemy my mind allows itself to really believe that I shall see you all again.'

Meanwhile at home, thousands of New Zealanders celebrated Armistice Day on November 12 with brass bands leading elaborately decorated floats and returned soldiers, schoolchildren and crazily costumed perform-_ ers marching along main streets carrying banners and flags. Public officials gave earnest speeches and crowds gathered to celebrate the end of four long years of war donning crazy costumes. Celebrations in Auckland were postponed until 1919 as a measure to prevent the spread of the influence epidemic.

The following year King George V personally requested all people in the British Empire to stop and observe two minutes silence. This practice continues today. After the Second World War, Britain and her dominions, including New Zealand, moved to commemorate those who died in both wars on Remembrance Sunday, the Sunday before November 11. But here in New Zealand Anzac Day has become the key day we remember our war dead.

More recently Armistice Day has marked significant events like the interment of the Unknown Warrior in 2004 and the unveiling of the New Zealand Memorial in Hyde Park London in 2006 for those killed in the First and Second World Wars.

New Zealand made a huge contribution to the First World War and paid a huge price. Just over 100,000 young New Zealand men served overseas from this small country with a population of barely one million. Of those, about 18,000 died on the steeps ridges of Turkey, the sands of Sinai and Palestine, and in the mud-filled trenches of the Western Front; 41,000 were wounded. They are remembered in the memorials we can see dotted around districts, towns and cities today.

That's why we took time last Sunday to honour their service and their sacrifice lest we forget.

Have your say on South Taranaki District's Liquor Control bylaw

The South Taranaki District Council (STDC) has recently reviewed the District's Liquor Control Bylaw and wants to know what you think about it by December 10.

The proposed Bylaw identifies public areas where alcohol is banned and looks to extend or introduce new Liquor Ban Areas in a number of South Taranaki towns.

STDC group manager of environmental services, John McKenzie, says the Council has proposed changes to its existing Liquor Control Bylaw in response to requests from the Police and the Patea and Egmont Plains Community Boards.

"They were concerned that alcohol being drunk in public places has resulted in an increase in anti-social behaviour and vandalism in some parts of our townships," says Mr McKenzie.

"We have made the changes they requested in our proposal and want to know what the wider community think before Council makes a final decision," he says.

The main changes in the proposed Liquor Control Bylaw are;

Hello all.

Rich Corry

Thursday, November 15, 2012

Well, what a great spell of fine weather we have been having and long may it continue. With the nice weather comes a lot more activity on our roads, with cyclists, runners and workers alike taking advantage of it and getting out and about.

With this in mind, first of all for those other road users, make sure you can be seen: it is as simple as wearing a reflective jacket, head lamp or such that can make the world of difference. For cyclists sometimes two a breast is one too many - remember you don't have a lot of protection and it goes without saying, always wear a helmet no matter how far you are going.

For those of you in vehicles remember a little bit of patience goes along way.

Last but not least, while we are talking about traffic there is also an influx of tractors and other large machinery involved in the agriculture sector out and about now so be extra careful around them - they are heavy and slow to stop.

I'll finish by offering sincere condolences to Mark, Jane, Clayton, Hineana and the many, many friends of Tracy Dando who was tragically taken from us all after a motor vehicle accident; she will be dearly missed but never forgotten. Good bye Tracy.

Take care everybody

Funding needed for Okato Playcentre

The Okato Playcentre. The co-operative faces a dilemma.

The Okato Playcentre needs some urgent financial relief. President Emily Davidson and her team are anxiously awaiting a Ministry of Education (MOE) report and associated engineers report regarding their educational facility. Their current licence expires at the end of 2014 when the Playcentre is up for – hopefully - renewal. Emily is aware, nonetheless, that there are some issues regarding the building, notably the bathroom area, as well as the possible need for earthquake-related strengthening.

The situation raises a dilemma. As the building is already fifty years old, is it better to upgrade, or would it be more advisable and less expensive to rebuild on the site or elsewhere? The decision is difficult because the parents have a lot of aroha involved in the premises. "It's a real hard call", admits Emily. Either option requires a lot of money - at least $150,000.

If the reports on the buildings upgrade requirements turn out to be not so good and the rebuild option is needed, the Playcentre cooperative will call for tenders. Hopefully the local businesses will be supportive and local tradespeople In the meantime, the people of the Okato Playcentre have been busy. As one fundraiser, a recipe book 'Bite Me' has been published with 100 "tried and true" recipes. With the first print run of 200 copies selling quickly, more have recently been printed. The booklet also contains some lovely colour pictures of the Playcentre's children who have contributed their favourite recipes. 'Bite Me' can be purchased for just $15 from Seed Coastal Organics or from Okato Playcentre itself. Alternatively you can TXT 027 326 5479 or try the email goodmax@xtra.co.nz The Playcentre also had a popular stall at the recent Vision Okato Market Day and their baking sold rapidly, along with the seedlings which were for sale. The Playcentre members are looking for ways to fundraise; if you think you could help them, or they could help you, please contact Angie Barron on 752 4445 or TXT 027 679 0502.

Historic Cape Light and Museum's official opening

The big day had finally arrived - on Friday November 2 the Historic Cape Light & Museum was officially opened at a function held at the Cape Egmont

(Another trustee Frank Williams resigned when he moved away from the area). The Cape Egmont Lighthouse Reserve Trust members started their mis-

(and his family) aspect of the project.

"All good things take time," Ron concluded to much laughter. Mayor of South Taranaki

Boat Club.

Proceedings were opened by Ron Thompson Chairperson of the Trustees. In his speech he paid tribute to Michele McDonald, Community Development Officer for the STDC, who has "thrown herself into the task".

Ron pointed that the project has been a while in the making – over ten years in fact, with fellow trustees Chris Aylward and Len Pentelow fellow trustees sion in 2000. The idea evolved from the replacement of the light at the Cape Egmont lighthouse, but first the replaced light had to be reconditioned a task which Len spent many hours at.

Ron also acknowledged Dr George Mason "a very forthright man" and philanthropist who contributed much time and funding to help with the project, on behalf of Rotary, with emphasis on Lord Rutherford

Ross Dunlop spoke next and highlighted Len Pentelow's involvement in the project. "Goodness knows where the light would be if Len hadn't taken over", he said. He also praised Rotary's role in the project, as well as all the people who have helped. "I just take my hat off to all you volunteers," he concluded.

Chairperson of the Egmont Plains Community Board Sharon Arlidge admired the hard work of so many - commenting, "I commend you for your sense of commitment". She also focused on the new museum meaning that the Warea community will have an important presence now. She concluded, "Thank you for your focus and energy' bringing the project to fruition.

Dr Mason spoke on behalf of Rotary International (New Plymouth West Club). He said the idea of honouring New Zealand's "most distinguished scientist" and the wider Rutherford family - arose as the project chosen to recognise the centenary of Rotary International. Eventually eight panels were developed showing different aspects of Rutherford's life, using photographs from Puke Ariki with help from Dr John Campbell of Canterbury University, who has written a biography of Rutherford. After outlining Rutherford's achievements and life, Dr Mason concluded, "Our thanks to the Cape Egmont Lighthouse Trustees for their ideas and contribution to finally make this such a superb site for our Rutherford Gallery".

A distinguished looking lady called Mary Fowler then spoke, revealing that she is Lord Rutherford's great niece. She spoke of visiting the Rutherford families flax mills in Lower Parihaki Road (where the Rutherford homestead was), Warea and just out of Opunake. Her maiden name was Lambie from "the other side of the family" she explained. She ing "very fond of his Uncle Ernie". She finished by saying, "I was always very proud of being "Lord Rutherford's niece". In 1910-1916 Anders Hansen was the lighthouse keeper at Cape Egmont Lighthouse. Another important visitor at the official opening was Gwyneth Scott, who is a descendant of Anders Hansen. She was with her husband John.

An interesting video was shown called 'The Historic Cape Light Museum' the work of Ashley Petersen of 'Colour Conversations".

The video dealt with associated shipwrecks and the workings of the light itself, as well as scenes inside the museum. Finally, the official ribbon to the museum was cut by Jim Foye in the presence of the three trustees Chris. Len and Ron. People were then free to have a good look inside at all the interesting photographs and information about lighthouses, shipwrecks, Lord Rutherford and his family, as well as much more.

Local Handcrafts Inc in Okato 2012

Okato township was lucky enough to have another craft fair, so soon after the Vision Okato one recently. This time it was run by Local Handcrafts Inc with a wide range of quality craft on offer.

One intriguing stall had brightly coloured concrete garden mushrooms 'Mum's mushrooms', crafted by Tracey.

Topsy Lynch had a great selection of booties, teddies and dolls, as well as a grocery raffle.

A very interesting stall was run by Ross MacDonald who had such items as brooches, coasters, earrings, pendants and even zippa grippas. He uses NZ timbers and paua laminate. He explained his craft work had kept him occupied since his retirement as an educator.

Gilbert Gibson had a large selection of books he had published (as well as some he'd written himself), to say nothing of a great range of posters (eg. 'The dog has not yet been fed') with a comical picture of a dog munching a man's leg). Quite a few books on display had historical reminisces of early settlers such as '1874 Maggie off To New Life in NZ'. He also had some 'subliminal sculptures' to capture imagination and promote motivation, Gilbert explained.

An eye-catching selection of booties, beanies, jerseys and much more was on display by Beth Stevenson and Anne Gibson. Quality merino baby hand knitting was also on offer.

Don't miss Local Handcrafts Inc's next event on Saturday December 15. It will be held at St Mary's Hall, Vivien Street, New Plymouth (9.30am to 3.30pm).

The Royal Commission's report on the Pike River Tragedy is not just about mine safety. It's about the nation's health and safety practices generally, and it's about the importance of good government regulation and oversight where there are risks to individual and public safety.

I'm sure the Pike River report will become compulsory reading for every senior public servant from now on. It should be compulsory reading for every politician

For advertising phone (06) 761 7016

Making sense of Pike River means big change needed

and, in fact, every one of us. Pike River was the accumulated effect of a serious deterioration in our health and safety laws, the running down of the department responsible for workplace inspections and health and safety enforcement, the grinding down of the workers' voice by undermining their choice to belong to a union and a general culture of favouring business interests over all others.

New Zealand has an appalling level of workplace death and injury compared to other developed countries. And the figures we use to measure this don't include death and injury to professional drivers harmed in the course of their work because they are treated as road statistics. Pike River must be a wake-up call to us all, as I suspect it was to the government even before the Royal Commission reported. Even though the Minister of Labour Kate Wilkinson has resigned as a result of the report, she can take credit for setting up the high hazards unit in the Department of Labour. The unit now applies a much heightened level of scrutiny and enforcement in the coal mining and oil and gas industries. Kate Wilkinson can also take credit for setting up the high-powered health and safety advisory group under the chairmanship of Rob Jaeger. These measures will go some way to improving the situation.

But there can be no substitute for extensive and deep-seated change. We have to start with our health and safety laws. We should not rely on those driven by the profit motive to "selfregulate". Doing this invites disastrous trade-offs, which we've seen all too often.

The more dangerous the industry, the more prescriptive the level of health and safety regulation is required. And the more rigorous the enforcement needs to be.

The most effective health and safety is achieved by involving those whose lives are most at risk if something goes wrong - the working men and women who do the hard graft, operate the machines and who routinely stand in harm's way.

It must be mandatory for workers in an enterprise to be deeply involved in developing health and safety measures, and they must have the right to refuse to do unsafe work.

Communities and schools

Hon Chester Borrows, Whanganui MP

In Wanganui and in South Taranaki boarding school and private school education plays a big role. Many parents, whether rurallybased or city-based, choose to send their children outside the state school system. Some do it because they live so remotely that daily attendance isn't practical. Others, because they feel that if they pay more they have the right to demand a level of tuition they cannot demand from a state school - a straight fee for service expectation. Some schools also have a special character or emphasis that the parents are prepared to pay for, possibly religious, sports or arts based.

Most people have views on education and many believe they are expert by virtue of the fact they went to school. These views are often shaped by the schools they attended, the manner in which they were taught, and how they reflect on those years.

Last week the last leg on the journey towards integration for Wanganui Collegiate was approved by Cabinet. For many in our electorate, it passed without notice. For those who run businesses in Wanganui, or have connections to the school, or are tasked with filling vacancies in many of our institutions such as the hospital and DHB, this decision was crucial. There is no other city I can name where the existence of a single school has such an important role in the business and social service infrastructure of that community. People who send their children to private schools pay their taxes and generally a higher level of tax than most. Like everyone else a proportion of that tax goes towards funding an excellent education system. Only about four per cent of students attend private schools and the per student contribution of the tax payer towards these students is about one seventh of what we pay for a state or integrated school student. Parents sending their children to a school like Wanganui Collegiate often pay more in GST than the taxpayer spends on educating that child. Some would say, "That's their choice", and they are right. People make choices to pay more than they have to for things like health insurance when ACC and public healthcare should cover all they need. The fact that people do pay more in healthcare allows us to have more hospitals and medical centres doing a wider range of work, and sometimes available to take publicly funded cases too. Private schools make big contributions to the education of New Zealanders and Pacific Islands peoples, contributions that would not be made without the special character and charter of those schools.

When I investigated the depth of sway Wanganui Collegiate had in our city, I found that businesses such as hotels and motels, restaurants, sports shops, taxis, clothing, suit-hire and drycleaners were affected by the trade generated by the school. So to the attraction to come and work in Wanganui as specialists in health, the professions and other immigrant businesses that provide jobs, income, and services. About two thirds of students come and board at the school from others towns and locations - Wanganui Collegiate provides the only seven day facility outside of Auckland and Wellington.

Whenever a school is succeeding, it makes for a strong system that leaves a lasting legacy. It makes no differenceto that legacy whether that is public, private or integrated. In communities and in education, the whole is greater than the sum of the parts.

Most enjoyable visit to the Little Shop of Horrors

Has the sadistic dentist Dr Orin (Erik Keen) met his match? Can he get the bowl off his head? Seymour (Richard Baylis) hopes not.

The Hawera Repertory's recent production of 'Little Shop of Horrors', directed by Shaun Campbell in his debut for the society, is the one I have enjoyed the most of any of theirs I have seen. All their productions are impeccably well done and enjoyable, but this one emerges as my favourite. The show was held at the newly renovated Hawera Memorial Hall with the season running from November 1-10. Just a word about their programme – it is a work of art in itself, well worth keeping as a memento. The intriguing cover art work was done by Linda Terrill.

I won't say too much about the storyline, as readers should go and see this show whoever puts it on - I don't want to spoil your evening by giving too much away. However, the plot involves people who work at a plant shop in early 1960s Skid Row, in a small Californian town, where one (initially) small plant demands (and gets) highly unusual attention. As it grows there are dire consequences.

The sets were imaginatively superb. Well done Shaun

Campbell, Clive Cullen and your hardworking team.

The acting was excellent and the singing enjoyable. It's a pity to single anyone out, but Erik Keen as Dr Orin the dentist-from-hell is one of the most intriguingly appalling characters as could be imagined anywhere. I'd recommend anyone who enjoys great acting should see this actor in anything he appears in the future.

Richard Baylis plays the nerdy shop assistant (with hidden depths) Seymour very well in his first role for Hawera Rep. His singing background showed to great effect in the many songs he had to perform.

Seymour's love interest Audrey (Deborah Thomas) was a great choice in her role, which she played with enticing finesse. She has a horrible, violent boyfriend to contend with, as well as an admirer.

The crusty shop owner Mr Mushnik was capably played by Mike Brotherton, as he switched from demanding boss to loving (?!) adoptive father. Or does he just have his eye on the main chance? Great effort.

Three street urchins Crystal

(Debbie Clancy), Ronette Kellogg) and Chiffon (Sarah Wagstaff) rounded out the main performers with excellent acting and singing.

The plant itself (Audrey II) deserves special mention, with its amazing booming voice, "FEED ME". Opunake's Dinnie Moeahu was the impressive voice, with Todd Woollett the puppeteer complementing him with appropriate movements.Memorable performance.

Hauiti Brider showed his versatility by playing three characters well. Paula Steiller and Lydia Weir ably rounded out the supporting cast.

Congratulations to all who made this musical so enjoyable and memorable, such as choreographer Kirsty Bourke, musical director Charles Pittams and vocal coach Julie Cudby, as well as everyone else on all sides of the stage.

Look out for Hawera Repertory's next production 'The Wizard of Oz', directed by Russ Standing. Auditions will be held on December 8 and 9.

Rolland McKellar

Audrey II the plant has become very large, demanding and menacing. Seymour looks very worried.

MANAIA COMMUNITY PRESCHOOL

Community Leadership for Learning

At Manaia Community Preschool children have the entire session to explore, be curious, develop their ideas and creativity in an unhurried and carefully structured way within a purpose built facility. Routines provide a framework within which our children can make decisions about their preferences for play.

At Manaia Community Preschool, children have access to all areas of the learning environment at any time and yes - this can get messy! Ultimately a goal for all members of society is to be able to take responsibility, so we make sure everyone considers others in the centre and tidies their area of play once finished and finds ways to work things out together. Developing independence and taking care of the environment concurrently is something we value here at Manaia. The children's independence is one important aspect of our day to day experience that is encouraged at every opportunity, from communicating with one another, to putting on a piece of clothing, to opening lunch packaging. Since our establishment in March 1999 Manaia Community Preschool has been focused on ensuring the children, families and whanau in our community have access to high quality early childhood education. Through the dedication of management committees and teachers over the years and the recent relationship we have with Massey University, the centre has a clear direction and the teaching and learning environment is a thriving and inspiring space for everyone. We have steadily been strengthening the quality of our service in ways that are valued by parents and teachers through focused self review and increasing community participation in the leadership of the centre. These are exciting times as we develop our strategic plan for the next 5 years, and begin to explore the Reggio Emilia approach to early childhood education in our indoor and outdoor learning space. We have been to visit many other services in Taranaki and Palmerston North, and we have appreciated the inspirational ideas they have shared with us.

Children learn as they play. Most importantly a the start in play children learn how to learn." Joan almon a the start is the start is

The Ministry of Education funded professional development programme, as well as some of our own resources, have enabled us to have an ongoing relationship with Massey University.

During this time we have been supported to lead inquiries into the operation of our service and to improve the quality of experience for children through up to date approaches to planning, assessment and evaluation.

The response to our needs as a community has been pivotal in supporting our decision making processes and is a key part of our story in recent years. We are a community based centre, governed by a group of volunteer parents in the community. Involvement of our parents and wider community ensures that the learning outcomes our children experience are relevant and meaningful for our families. Our documentation really showcases the amazing learning our children and teachers are leading. Our connection with Manaia Primary School begins with our centre being on the border of the school grounds. Our relationship strengthens our transition to school process and we enjoy having the older children in the Manaia community mentor our children during session. In addition, many of our children transition to other schools in the area such as Auroa, Kaponga and Matapu schools. Our involvement in the new transition to school network in our area signals a strengthening of transition processes to benefit children and families now and in the future. One of our long term goals is "To be responsive to the rhythm of family life and the culture of our community". It is through this goal that we are excited to be exploring the significance of our location in South Taranaki-how our centre came to be nestled at the foot of our majestic maunga Mt Taranaki.

By increasing our understanding of the history, culture and language of our local area, we will be in a stronger position to make more informed governance decisions around our strategic long term goals.

We invite you to visit Manaia Community Preschool to discover and experience for yourself how we can be involved in your childrens early learning experiences beyond the home. Come for a drive through the beautiful coastal district to experience our rural charm and what we have to offer. As with any education service it is about the community that surrounds it, that contributes to the foundation upon which future success in learning and leading can be continued. "For our families and our families after us".

We will be waiting to welcome you.

Federation Chief Executive TeHoripoKaraitiana says: "With the growing Maori economy valued at $37 billion, the Federation of Maori Authorities is develgies and so working with the New Zealand science and innovation system and with Government agencies to develop their assets is seen as important, says Mr Karaitiana.

Traci Houpapa, Chairman of the Federation of Maori Authorities says: "We often port Maori business growth that will benefit all New Zealand."

Three students working as a team will be hosted by Industrial Research where they will work with science and commercialisation teams before heading out to work in several of our Federation member trusts and incorporations to experience the day to day running of a Maori enterprise.

As part of this pilot programme, the team of students will meet with key Government agencies involved in science and innovation and economic development to get a sense of the macro picture of Maori development. During the programme, the students will be supported by their academic mentors at Otago University as they undertake this programme.

In the long term, the Federation hopes the internships will provide the participants with some sense of the challenges of working in this complex environment and help develop smart minds and rich talent that can begin to bridge the worlds of Maori business with science and innovation and with Government.

At the end of the pilot programme the students will present their findings to science organisations, iwi and Maori businesses and to Government agencies with recommendations as to how this type of internships could be fostered in the future.

"This is an excellent opportunity to lift the development, productivity and performance of our Maori asset base by developing smart talent that will be the future connectors and facilitators to develop the Maori economy" says Ms Houpapa.

Opunake Friendship hosts city RSA

Another enjoyable afternoon. A bus load of RSA members from New Plymouth made their annual visit. We provided lunch for them at St Barnabas Church Hall then on to our Town Hall for an afternoon of camaraderie, entertainment and rolling raffles. Ray Edwards kept toes tapping with his repertoire of old favourites, vocally pleasing and the keyboard accompaniment was just great. Thank you, your songs were very appropriate for the 'mature age' of your audience – who, by the way, would probably say "Hey! We are 'recycled teenagers'!".

I was pleased when our visitors won a few raffles. Rosalie distributed gifts to those in the audience who celebrated an October birthday which also included members of the R.S.A. Our hostesses for the afternoon were the TeKiri Women's Institute – thank you ladies for your hard work, time, baking skills, afternoon tea and company. Our Friendship afternoons are held on the last Monday of each Month at 1.30pm. We provide entertainment; afternoon tea and a raffle ticket are included with a $2.00 entry. Everyone is welcome.We are not a club so you do not have to join. We are here to open the doors of friendship to those people like ourselves I guess who have found themselves at some stage in their life – lonely, or new to the district or just want to have an outing and meet people. # Vision Okato market day a success

Vision Okato staged a vibrant Market Day at Hempton Hall on Saturday November 3. The inclement weather did not put off the people - a multitude of people turned up. Organiser Mel Abbott was delighted at the turnout. "I'm really pleased. I was a bit worried about the weather", she said.

One of the stallholders, Carol Ward, at her first market day, was impressed with what she saw around her. "There's a lot of talent here - good quality", she enthused. She had such items as cot duvets, quilts and bags - all handcrafted by herself.

One of the most popular stalls was the one run by Okato Playcentre. President Emily Davidson said the cakes and biscuits on display sold very fast. "This table was absolutely covered earlier", she explained. She estimated that 85% of the edibles had sold within the first hour or so. Her organisation needs to fundraise to the tune of $150,000 to ensure their building up to scratch. (See article on page 6). They also had plant seedlings on sale, such as sunflowers and various vegetables.

A recipe book ('Bite Me') was on sale with over 100 recipes to tempt any palate. An interesting stall was run by Michelle Amiraukt, who fashions seaglass into attractive necklaces, pendants and earrings. Seaglass multi-coloured glass is washed up by the sea, with the sharp edges eroded away.

Teresa Goodin at her stall had a wide selection of fragrant flower essences, which she makes up herself. Adjoining her stall was another with essences which promote good health. There was such a diversity of craft from talented people. Virtually all the items on offer had been created by the stallholders. "There is a good atmosphere - everyone is in good spirits", said one stall holder of the pleasant ambience at the event.

Manaia WI members visited King Edward Park Hawera for their November outing, and were given a comprehensive history of the park by the curator David Bruce

Although it was a very cold day, the spectacular displays in the gardens of various annuals, roses and many lovely shrubs made a great show and the revamp of the children's play area was looking great - we would recommend that locals take the time to visit our beautiful park and we congratulate David and his team for the work they have done – it really is a great asset to the town. To finish off the day members enjoyed a lovely lunch at 'The Fat Cow' restaurant,

New pharmacy welcomed

Open just a week, Opunake is welcoming their new Opunake Coastal Pharmacy with a lot of people coming in to check it out and say hello according to Jin Kim, joint owner.

"They've been very welcoming," said Jin.

We've had lots of compliments on the shop, the interior of which has been transformed into a pristine, modern purpose-built pharmacy barely recognisable from its former somewhat avant-garde look when it was a cafe. In earlier days it was the Westpac bank. The painting of the exterior of the building to a sober grey and pale yellow has met with general approval also.

Managing the pharmacy during the week is fellow pharmacist and half owner of the business Tae-Wan Kim who is looking to move to Opunake.

The pharmacy is open on Saturdays from 10am till 2pm as well as weekdays from 8:30am till 5:30pm. They are running a number of opening specials including 30% off vitamins. Reading glasses and sunglasses are also reduced 30%. They are also doing free blood pressure monitoring.

Tae-Wan is looking for a granny flat or a fully or semi furnished small house with 1 or 2 bedrooms in Opunake.

If anyone can help can they contact the Opunake Coastal Pharmacy.

One of the attractions of Bell Block was the fact that, when they first bought the service station 12 years ago, it was "quite rural". There's been big changes since, however, with both housing and commercial development in the area. Hence the attrac-

Egmont A&P Show sets tone for rural roads

"Be safe, drive safe," is the theme of this year's Honda Egmont A&P show in Hawera on Friday 16 and Saturday 17 November.

Show president David Turner says the theme reflects the association's desire to support its rural communities to look after themselves and their families while driving on our rural roads. That theme is carried on throughout the show and features strongly in the annual how parade which will make its way along Hawera's High Street on Friday night

The show itself features a huge array of different entertainment and this year the organising committee is thrilled to be hosting the Topp Twins who will take part in the parade and also showcase their skills at the showgrounds on Saturday at 11.15am and 2.15pm, they will also judge a yodel-

Expect encounters with some curious characters at the annual agricultural shows ling competition starting at 1.30pm, which is free to enter on the day Local entertainer Abby will also keep the toes tapping and hands clapping alongside Lynda and Jools Topp, whom many regard as some of this country's best ever entertainers.

More exciting and interactive things to see and do include roving performers, children's entertainment, wood chopping competitions, a V8 car simulator, a small animal tent featuring lots of new animals, highland dancing, dog trials and many activities for children in Kidzone hosted by Show secretary Celine Filbee says the strong equestrian contingent, always a prestigious competition drawing entries from all over the country. The cattle section is also well supported with many breeds on show.

The show has a large home industry section, based around baking, growing vegetables, sewing and knitting, photography, model building and cut flowers. New to the section this year is a competition for the towns Opportunity Shops and the Great Pie Bakeoff will see last year's winners looking to keep their titles.

Roadsafe Taranaki will host and interactive tent and entertainment area including Rock climbing, the Egmont Tyres Wheel Change competition, a display from Hawera Crash Rescue team at 12.15 both days, Log Jousting and lots of giveaways.

Then of course the usual sideshows will keep the older children and younger adults in adrenalin mode with the rides and contests available.

Purebreeder's Jersey Club Classification Field Day

This year's Classification Day was held at Paul and Christine Vanner's Loch-Raven Jersey Stud in Kapuni last month. Unfortunately the attendance was a bit disappointing.

The Classification convenor Mr Dick Johnson, a director of the Purebred Society, opened up the proceedings by addressing the aspects and ethics of the Society on what was expected of those who go out in the field when the classification begins. Mr Johnson stressed that presentation and tidy attire makes a big difference. He also said that a good attitude, always being polite, introducing yourself and showing confidence in what you are doing along with spending a little time talking to the proprietors before you start your #### classifying.

Mr Johnson also pointed out to the audience that punctuality is very important and to be on time all the time. He recommended that if they are running late for whatever reason, notify the next customer that you are running late – it puts them at ease when you finally turn up. He also passed on some other tips such as not passing on information about a previous member's cattle, and that cell phones are not permitted on the field whilst classification was underway - professionalism is required at all times.

Then we all followed Paul Vanner to the paddock where he had three groups of five heifers to classify. After we finished each group the President, Malcolm Revell,

Local teacher selected for NZ sevens team

Lauren Burgess, (pictured right) who teaches physical education and science at Opunake High School, has recently been selected for the NZ Sevens Rugby team. "I was stoked. It was a dream come true to represent New Zealand", she says. Lauren has gone close before; earlier she was selected as a non travelling reserve for the NZ Sevens team, which was sent to Fiji to contest the Oceania Cup. The NZ team ended up winning.

The NZ team heads to Dubai on November 26 where Lauren intends to make the most of her opportunity playing as a forward (hooker) against the other countries that are competing. The tournament runs from November 30 to December 1.

Before the team heads for Dubai they will go to Mount Maunganui, Tauranga for a training camp, which runs from November 21 to 26.

Beyond the Dubai event Lauren has a clear goal – she intends to do her utmost to "stay in shape" to make the squad to contest the World Cup, which will be held in Moscow, Russia next year. This is the first year there has been a World Cup for women's Sevens Rugby, so it is Lauren's chance to be part of sporting history.

Lauren is also an accomplished netball player who played this year for Inglewood United Rugby Football Club (not a misprint) and she has had a season with the Central Pulse.

Taranaki and Manawatu community organisations benefit from New Zealand Post giveaway

New Zealand Post will give more than 1.2 million 'postage-included' envelopes to non-profit community organisations and programmes this year - including 387 organisations in the Taranaki / Manawatu region.

In all 2,781 groups will benefit from the envelopes, provided as part of Community Post, New Zealand Post's annual show of support for community-based initiatives. This year, for the first time, national organisations were able to make a single application for the free envelopes - instead of each branch needing to apply individually - and 110 organisations have taken that approach.

In addition, the Child Cancer Foundation, CanTeen, Special Olympics NZ and the Asthma Foundation each received $10,000 worth of free marketing services from New Zealand Post - as did the Epilepsy Association, the AIDS Foundation, the Arthritis Foundation, the Life Flight Trust, Surf Lifesaving NZ, and the Clown Doctor NZ Charitable Trust. Those marketing services will assist them in communicating more effectively with key stakeholders, and assist in activities such as fundraising.

A wide range of community organisations in Taranaki / Manawatu will also benefit from Community Post this year - with 387 receiving supplies of free postage included envelopes.

Some noteworthy examples of local organisations which will benefit include: • Opunake Playcentre

· Stratford Amateur Swimming Club

• New Plymouth Group Rid-

• Opunake Community

Baths Society Preschooler Swimming School • Highlands Amateur Swim-

New Zealand Post's head of "Groups like these, with a passion for improving and informing the communities they live in, deserve to be recognised for the excellent work they do," Nicola Airey said.

"Community Post is our way of expressing gratitude on behalf of the community.

"It's a chance for New Zealand Post to support these groups as they help make the world a better place, one community at a time," Nicola Airey said.

Taranaki October rainfall

There was quite a contrast in rainfall totals during October, with most South Taranaki sites recording a lot less rain when compared to Northern Taranaki. Rainfall ranged from 129% of normal over 20 days of rain at the Stony River site near Okato, to 126% of normal at Dawson Falls (24 days of rain), where most sites near and around New Plymouth were all around normal amounts (18-22 days of rain recorded), then heading further South, Stratford received 86% or normal (19 days of rain), where as Patea only recorded 46% of normal over 11 days of rain.

Year to date, most recorder sites around Taranaki are recording at or around normal amounts, however TeKiri and Patea have been 21% and 17% lower than normal respectively. On the other side of the coin, Dawson Falls has recorded 24% more than normal for this time period.

River flows for the month have been below normal mean flows when compared to previous October figures; however, there have been no new minimum flows recorded.

Water temperatures follow a similar trend, being lower than October means, and no new minimum or maximum peak figures were recorded

Air temperatures are all starting to warm up as we move closer to summer, however there have still been a few cold nights!

ryone who was involved – I hope you had a great time welcoming people into your gardens or visiting new gardens for inspiration.

My wife and I greatly enjoyed the gardens we had time to visit.

We have a deserved reputation in Taranaki for being great growers. Sure we have near-perfect growing conditions, but it's the passion and creativity of locals that mean whether we're growing a rhododendron or getting a dairy pasture just right, we do a fine job of it.

Meanwhile, the last few months have seen hundreds of councillor and staff hours go into the review of all Council services and activities, with the help of independent experts.

Stage one is completed: We have identified a number of opportunities where there may be potential to make some changes in the way the services are delivered, and these are now being investigated further as part of stage two.

We are also reviewing the entire capital expenditure programme – that is, the programme of planned projects to build new or upgraded Council infrastructure during the next 10 years. We will be looking more closely at all renewals funding, reviewing the cost of all internal services, and reviewing our Financial Strategy and how it links to the Perpetual Investment Fund.

No decisions have been made yet.

When a report goes to the Council in February next year, decisions will be made on what proposals for change will need to be consulted on with the community through the Annual Plan process. Final decisions on these proposals will be made in June 2013, after public consultation is completed.

Some ideas may require more in-depth investigation and may not be a part of this process.

So, a lot of work has been done and there is a lot more yet to do. We will keep you up to date with progress.

A beaut little Aussie poem

The sun was hot already - it was only 8 o'clock The cocky took off in his ute, to go and check his stock. He drove around the paddocks checking wethers, ewes and lambs, The float valves in the water troughs, the windmills on the dams.

He stopped and turned a windmill on to fill a water tank And saw a ewe down in the dam, a few yards from the bank. "Typical bloody sheep," he thought, "they've got no common sense, "They won't go through a gateway but they'll jump a bloody fence."

The ewe was stuck down in the mud, he knew without a doubt She'd stay there 'til she carked it if he didn't get her out But when he reached the water's edge, the startled ewe broke free And in her haste to get away, began a swimming spree.

He reckoned once her fleece was wet, the weight would drag her down If he didn't rescue her, the stupid sod would drown. Her style was unimpressive, her survival chances slim He saw no other option, he would have to take a swim.

He peeled his shirt and singlet off, his trousers, boots and socks And as he couldn't stand wet clothes, he also shed his jocks. He jumped into the water and away that cocky swam He caught up with her, somewhere near the middle of the dam.

The ewe was quite evasive, she kept giving him the slip He tried to grab her sodden fleece but couldn't get a grip At last he got her to the bank and stopped to catch his breath She showed him little gratitude for saving her from death

She took off like a Bondi tram around the other side He swore next time he caught that ewe he'd hang her bloody hide. Then round and round the dam they ran, although he felt quite puffed He still thought he could run her down, she must be nearly stuffed

The local stock rep came along, to pay a call that day. He knew this bloke was on his own, his wife had gone away, He didn't really think he'd get fresh scones for morning tea But neither was he ready for what he was soon to see.

He rubbed his eyes in disbelief at what came into view For running down the catchment came this frantic-looking ewe And on her heels in hot pursuit and wearing not a stitch The farmer yelling wildly "Come back here, you lousy bitch!"

The stock rep didn't hang around, he took off in his car The cocky's reputation has been damaged near and far. So bear in mind the Work Safe rule when next you check your flocks Spot the hazard, assess the risk, and!

Kiwi Prehab: Cottage to cutting edge of prefabrication in New Zealand (did you know the Treaty House at Waitangi is a prefab?).

Flowing down the staircase into the exhibition will be

Creature, a curved, installation of interlocking pieces digitally fabricated by a team from Victoria University's School of Architecture, led by programme di-both end 18 November so be quick and don't miss it! rector Mark Southcombe.

"Prefabricated design in a digital age allows us to go beyond the conventional – it offers opportunities for making complex forms, simply and economically," Southcombe says. "It means that in the future we will see natural systems and organic and geological forms potentially infiltrate design processes and the emergence of quite different, visionary architecture that was not possible in the past."

Pamela Bell, who wrote her Victoria University Master of Architecture thesis on the subject, says prefabrication is about creativity, innovation and is "an agent for change".

"The main thing that holds back prefabrication, commercially, is that people still associate it with cheap, flimsy, temporary buildings and usually school classrooms." The prefab solution is highly relevant to what's happening in New Zealand today. "I think, obviously, with the shortage of houses in Auckland and Christchurch, it's a way of responding to crises where there's a huge number of houses needed in a very short time," she says. However, these houses will not be temporary, bang 'em up structures. "We are talking about high-quality, architect-designed, sustainable and permanent solutions." They will also be eco-friendly. A shining example of this is the First Light House – a zero-energy dwelling also designed by Victoria University students. In 2011, it was New Zealand's first entry into an international solar competition in Washington DC, where it gained third place. There will be a model of this building in the exhibition.

Also on show will be images and film footage also shown at the Museum of Modern Art in New York's 2008 exhibition, Home Delivery: fabricating a modern dwelling.

Kiwi Prefab: Cottage to Cutting Edge is presented in partnership with the Taranaki Regional Council, TSB Community Trust, Resene, Radio Network and New Plymouth District Council.

Stratford Art Society has an exciting exhibition at Percy Thomson Gallery

The Stratford Art Society presents their exciting biannual art exhibition showcasing a range of local talent including new members exhibiting for the first time. This would be a great opportunity to purchase beautiful original Christmas gifts.

The Society's exhibition opens 7.30pm on the 23rd November and runs until the 14th December in the Percy Thomson Gallery. Guest speaker Ruth Harvey, Curator of Pictorial Collection from Puke Ariki, also judge of recent Taranaki National Art Awards, will be officially opening the exhibition. Gallery Director Sue Morton says, "There will be a visual variety of members work including Maree Liddington's stunning tapestry weaving – Nga-Motu. I am always interested in the direction the artists are heading and they never fail to amaze me."

On display will be the usual wide range of media including wood turning, pottery, textile, photography, painting and sculpture along with the usual surprises.

The Society also plans on having a sales table for art books and magazines and a "Pot luck" Christmas hamper raffle.

On this month in history

On November 22, 1982 famous aviator Jean Batten died in Palma, Majorca. Although she was the most famous New Zealand woman at the time of her aviation exploits (1930s), no one seemed to know much about her in her new life. She was eventually buried in a pauper's grave. For five years in New Zealand it was a mystery as to what had happened to her or where she was. Finally, a relative, her nephew Rick received her death certificate in the mail in late September 1987.

Jean Batten's achievements included solo flights from England to India (1933), England to Australia (1934) and Australia to England (1935) - thus becoming the first woman to fly both ways. She also flew from England to Brazil.

In 1936 she made the first direct flight from England to NZ in record time.

Book review: The case against fluoride

JAMES BECK, MD, PhD | H. S. MICKLEM, DPhil

The Case Against Fluoride; How hazardous waste ended up in our drinking water and the bad science and powerful politics that keep it there. Written by Paul Connett Phd, James Beck MD Phd and HS Micklem DPhil. Published by Chelsea Green. White River Junction, Vermont (2010).

With the South Taranaki District Council considering the possible fluoridation of water in towns such as Patea, it is perhaps timely to review this book now.

The book is scientifically based – they quote many studies, yet is very readable. Scientific jargon is kept to a minimum.

The authors outline how (historically) the practice of fluoridation of water supplies came about - poorly designed science around (or thereabouts), 1950 mostly conducted in the US. They paint a grim picture of vested interests (commercial and political) vigorously promoting fluoridation with action against anyone (including dismissal) daring to suggest that the practice urgently needed further scrutiny, notably in scientific studies. They explain how any studies, which had the "wrong" findings were most unlikely to be accepted for publication in periodicals.

Philosophically, they point out that mass medication is against basic principles of humanity as outlined in various charters many countries are signatories to. They also point out that the addition to water is not how the sub#### stance works best anyway. It is most effective applied topically, as in cleaning with fluoridated toothpaste. It is also unnecessary as most toothpastes have this ingredient. Recently, examining all the toothpastes at a local supermarket, I discovered that all contained fluoride.

The authors say that the safe level has never been accurately determined and argue that this should be set at zero. That is, fluoridation should not occur at all and should be halted where it exists. Most countries, notably European countries, do not fluoridate their water supplies (Just 2% of people in Europe).

They point out that everyone's dose is variable in places where the water is fluoridated. Heavy water consumers, such as (for example) manual labourers toiling under a hot sun will end up with inordinately larger amounts of fluoride than more sedentary people working inside. This is significant because even proponents of fluoride accept that the substance is a poison at sufficiently high levels.

They quote many studies which suggest that fluoride is not safe, especially for certain vulnerable groups, Perhaps top of the list are babies fed formula who may be getting 250 times as much fluoride as those infants fed breast milk, which naturally has a trace.

Other research links it with virtually everything you can think of including lowered IQ, Alzheimer's disease, and a propensity to bone fractures and even bone cancer (osteosarcoma). Certain vulnerable people, such as those with kidney disease, thyroid dysfunction or arthritis should not be subjected to fluoridated water.

A visually apparent effect of fluoridation of water is young people with unsightly dental fluorosis, which is expensive to treat and can have cause self-esteem issues with those affected. This condition is caused by fluoride interfering with growing teeth cells.

Bias is an issue. The findings of the following have been virtually ignored. In 2006 the NRC (National Research Council) of the USA set up a panel equally balanced with professionals from both sides of the fence, as well as some of a neutral viewpoint. They examined hundreds of studies. In an article published in Scientific American the Chairperson of the review panel, Dr John Doull, had this to say. "What the committee found is that we've gone with the status quo regarding fluoride for many years - for too long really - and now we need to take a fresh look .... when we looked at the studies that have been done, we found that many of these (health) questions are unsettled and we have much less information than we should, considering how long this (fluoridation) has been going on" (Page 273).

Before any local body considers fluoridation, at very least, they need to read a comprehensive range of scientific evidence, and take a fresh look as urged by Dr Doull.

Dame Kate Harcourt will be performing in Taranaki

Fresh from a successful revival of her Flowers from My Mothers Garden at Wellington's Downstage Theatre, actress Dame Kate Harcourt is coming to Taranaki in another version of her family story.

She will appear in Virtues from The Past at Inglewood's delightful Cue Theatre, sharing a journey through time with stories of her ancestors, her family and her life.

Dame Kate was born in Amberley, Canterbury and has a fascinating family history, In Virtues from the Past she celebrates the tenacity of her ancestors, recalls her early years training as a singer, broadcaster (remember Listen With Mother?) and actress, and highlights some of her theatre performances.

Dame Kate Harcourt can lay claim to two very large Scottish clans, the Camerons and the Macfarlanes, and another Scottish family, the Fultons. All will be revealed of this intertwining of families from the social upheavals of Scotland and England, stories of hardship, perseverance, cruelty, kindness, failures and successes.

This is a wonderful opportunity to see and hear the 'grande dame' of New Zealand theatre, and ask her your own questions.

Virtues from the Past shows at TET Cue Theatre, Inglewood, Sunday December 2 at 2pm and 7.30pm; bookings ($20) at Inglewood Book Centre, 06 756 7032. Don't delay booking your tickets because this is a unique thertrical opportunity not to be missed.

Puke Ariki exhibitions manager Gerard Beckingsale says Kiwi Prefab: From Cottage to Cutting Edge will inspire people to think and dream. "The exhibition is going to burst out on to the foreshore in New Plymouth," he says. "The reason for placing the prefabs in that setting is to exaggerate the Kiwi dream of having a well-built house by the sea."

New Zealanders love their homes, so this exhibition will have broad appeal to Kiwi Prefab: Cottage to Cutting Edge, an exhibition developed by Puke Ariki and Victoria.

Beautiful baches, creative construction and divine design will soon be bursting on to the New Plymouth foreshore and flowing through Puke Ariki.

Kiwi Prefab: Cottage to Cutting Edge, an exhibition developed by Puke Ariki and Victoria University of Wellington, will showcase New Zealand building innovation, globally prize-winning ideas and ask the question – is prefabrication the way of the future?

The exhibition, which runs at Puke Ariki from December 1 2012 to April 1 2013, will take a retrospective tecturally designed prefabs and look at the potential of digital design. It will also highlight the importance of going "green". Visitors can design their own prefab to add to an evolving community village,
